

ON THE TECHNOLOGICAL AGE

The technological age we live in today gives us the chance to observe what happens to people in real time.

the technological age has unified spaces the technological age has cancelled the obstacle of distance, annulled the obstacle of non-contemporaneity.

with the technology we have achieved man can directly see watch live experiences of joy or pain, of other peoples' joy and pain the same time it is happening the very moment they are living it.

today more than ever
man has the possibility to conceive the unification of the life of humankind.

today more than ever
man is responsible for entering into that understanding not of globality for an interest for the few to have and use and consume, but man has the responsibility to enter into the concept of unification for support, comfort, peace, brotherhood of nations in the absolute respect for cultural diversities, for different environments for different beliefs and religions.

man's technological age offers a real unification for the planet, too with all the known universe.

to go forth in this responsibility of awareness means reaching self-understanding.
